CURRICULAR PRIORITIES

Mission of the University

The University of Michigan is a major institution of higher education committed to the search for truth. It offers a wide range of programs, graduate and undergraduate, and seeks the highest level of achievement. The primary mission is undergraduate education, research, and service. The University also offers a variety of social activities and cultural programs. It assists students in their own career objectives. It also offers all types of opportunities for broad intellectual enrichment. It nurtures a spirit of inquiry and creativity among its students. The University is a place where diverse in age, sex, and ethnicity students can learn together and work together to maintain a balance between career and broader interests. The University also has a mission beyond its own programs. It seeks to contribute to the welfare of society through its research, teaching, and public service. It also participates in other kinds of institutions and other educational movements.
